Ladder Safety

Ladders are among the most common tools found in workplaces and homes alike. Despite their simplicity, ladders pose significant risks. Fortunately, organizations that prioritize safety through training, inspections, and adherence to standards have seen a marked reduction in these accidents.

According to the American Ladder Institute's 2024 Ladder Safety Training and Citations Survey, ladder-related injuries have dropped by 21% since 2020. This encouraging trend is attributed to improved safety awareness and enforcement.

To make sure you are using ladders safely, check out laddersafetytraining.org. Provided by the American Ladder Institute, this training covers safe ladder practices for all applications, both at work and at home.
